

Suitable for readers aged 14 and up...

Taking the Plunge — The fourth and final book in the Rebecca series, in which Geoff goes round in circles, Lacey drinks some tea, Becky sees a ghost, Hilary forgets her bath and almost everyone gets a bit wet.

Now Rebecca has left school and Mrs Bagshott far behind. At eighteen years old she's off to university. But which university? Has she made the right choice? It's a time to make new friends and see new places, but to continue to have adventures every bit as crazy as those she had before. Despite malevolent motorcycles, curious cats, terrifying tunnels and too much tea she realizes her ambition at last.

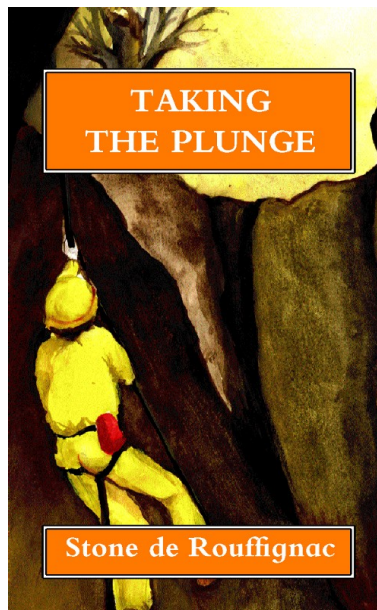

<http://www.amazon.co.uk/dp/B0175EU52G>

'Beth and Louise think we should go back,' I said.

'We can't go back! Why do they want to go back?'

'They don't think this is the right way.'

'Well, I must admit I'm inclined to agree with them.'

'Where are we?' I yawned.

'At the pub!'

Ah.

'You'll be able to have something to help you get to sleep!' Martyn suggested.

'Like cocoa,' wet blanket Hilary butted in.

Paperweight Press

'Coffee,' said Lacey. 'Black. No sugar.'

'Ummm, how did I get here?' I asked, not sure quite how to phrase the question.

'The stork brought you.'

'No, I mean, last night.'

Stone de Rouffignac is the pen name of Ian Harding